Among the things nipped by the frost was Gov. Bell's corn.

We wager that The Sphinx of Proctor grinned yesterday.

Editor Johnson of Randolph landed on his feet in the Orange county senatorship fight, and the Republican voters will make no mistake if they send him to Montpelier next fall.

We are surprised that London should make such a "fuss and feathers" over an American and his bride. Little wonder that the Longworths seem a little bored by the attention paid them. Even if the bride is the daughter of the President of the United States there is no call for the tremendous curiosity displayed by the Britishers, any more than there was of Americans over their marriage.

PUTS NEW LIGHT ON CASE.

To the newspaper reading public who have been following the conduct of the Tucker trial in Massachusetts a new phase is put on the case by the article in the Boston News Bureau, as reprinted in The Times today. This public, which has been acting as a jury in and of itself, was dependent upon the press to give them the evidence that came to the court. On such evidence that came to them a great part of the public was forced to believe that there was grave doubt of the young man's guilt. According to the Boston News Bureau, however, a great part of the evidence, and a most damaging part, never reached the newspaper readers, for the reason that it was unprintable in a decent journal. In fact, the court attendants did not hear a portion of the testimony, for it was decided by agreement of the counsel that it should not be read, but should go direct to the jury room. What this evidence is perhaps will never be made public, and it is well that it be suppressed. With this understanding of the case the jury composed of the newspaper reading public will take a different view of the conviction of the unfortunate young man who received the death penalty this morning.

"WE ARE IN AN EPOCH"

As if his defense of the Standard oil trust were not enough to give him fame, Chancellor James R. Day of Syracuse university now comes out with a word—yes, several words—in favor of the beef trust which is being broiled and the President's griddle. Chancellor Day declares that "this is an epoch we are in"; and it certainly is, but not in the same way that the Syracuse man states. He says: "Nothing is right, everything is wrong. Everybody seems to be on the verge of being drawn into the filth of slime, of defamation, or the deadly firebrand of suspicion." Chancellor Day does an injustice to the epoch which he speaks with his presence; he forgets San Francisco and the splendid outpouring of material sympathy in its time of need. Is the epoch bad and are the people rotten at heart when they show such evidences of brotherhood? The death of the late William McKinley in Chancellor Day's own state the Syracuse man must have forgotten. Did not the nation rise and extol his virtues as a man and a citizen?

These two are instances picked out at random, but they show the error of Chancellor Day's position. They show that where there is virtue, where there is a chance to praise, the people of the nation are quick and eager to extend praise and credit. They show finally, in contrast with some other matters of more recent occurrence, that where there is reason for condemnation the people of the nation are as quick to condemn and to place the stigma. Whether those condemned be the beef trust, the oil trust, the insurance grafters or the government embezzlers, they are all being uncovered in this uncovering epoch. Let Chancellor Day give specific instances wherein persons or things have been drawn into the deadly firebrand of suspicion, when afterwards did not prove that the drawing was correctly done. If he can show one case where unjust charges were brought, the government can produce ten cases where the suspicion was well fastened. This is certainly an epoch, one in which the people are learning to separate the right from the wrong.

JINGLES AND JESTS.

Queen of Today.

A flutter of frills and laces
As light as the air that we breathe,
O'er all most bewitching of faces;
An akle, silk-arched, underneath,
A chaperon, wise in her duty,
A hammock, a nook and a moon—
Behold the American beauty!
A maiden new-born with the June!

Right to Work.

Ever occur to you that you are called upon every day to do a lot of unnecessary work, in addition to that you are compelled to do to earn a living? So many people think they have a right to work you.—Atchison Globe.

Vacation.

You buy some outing clothes,
Re-skin your house, "To Let,"
You bid goodbye to city ways,
And this is what you get:

The chigger in the grass,
The brown bug in the bed,
The snake in the glass,
The swelling in the head.

Still More Difficult.

"Did you ever notice how awkward the average woman is in driving a horse?"

"Yes. Strange, too, for a lot of them are pretty graceful at managing a mule of a husband."—Detroit Free Press.

She Shouldn't Have Told.

"May I ask your age?" said the bold, bad man.
To the maid with eyes of blue.
"Why, I'm twenty-three," said the blue eyed maid.
And the bad man said "Skiddoo!"
—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Loveless.

"You should hustle more," she said.
"Be earnest and ambitious to acquire a fortune. You can't make anything by sitting still."

"I can make love," he simpered.—Philadelphia Press.

Why, Oh, Why?

Why is it folks sit this way in the car, we miss.
While in the car we catch at last
We're jammed like this?
—Catholic Standard and Times.

Evening Things Up.

"Jugglers seems to be down pretty low."
"Yes; a man usually does get down low whose only idea is a high old time."—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Saddest.

Of all sad words
With which we're hit
The worst are, "Dear Sir—Please remit."
—Milwaukee Sentinel.

June is the "Negligee" month. Here are shirts that will add to your comfort every day. There is no check to the popularity of the plaid. Madness.
Spaniel—Where did you acquire your taste for art?
Pug—When I was quite young I once bit an art student.—Life.

Plain Enough.
When we want advice that's helpful,
We must buy it, all agree.
We get nothing good for nothing
That's not good-for-nothing. See?
—Catholic Standard and Times.

Child of the Newly Rich.
"Was he born with a silver spoon in his mouth?"
"No; with a silver knife in his mouth."—Smart Set.

Another Version.
Little beds of flowers,
Little beds of paint,
Make a pleasant cottage
Out of one that ain't.
—Minneapolis Journal.

A Good Deal of Sannecus.
Landlady—Fish is good brain food.
Boarder—I'll have brain fever if I stay here much longer.—New York Press.

As Spoken.
A briquette is a little brick,
But let this notion soak
Into your memory: a croquette
Is not a little croak.
—Judge.

A Good Figure.
Howell—That girl is a picture.
Powell—The picture has a good frame.—Detroit Free Press.

Pictorial Perils.
I bought myself a camera;
Unhappy is the end
Each time I took a portrait
I lost another friend.
—Salt Lake Sun.

NORTHFIELD.

Miss Florence Cashen of Montpelier visited her aunt, Miss Alice Clancy, over Sunday.

Everett Talbot, who has been visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James H. Talbot, for the past ten days, leaves tomorrow for Rutland, where he will visit relatives before returning to New York city.

Children's day was appropriately observed in the different churches in the village on Sunday, with exercises by the children, consisting of instrumental and vocal music and recitations.

Miss Myra Judd of Iowa is making a short visit with her aunt, Mrs. W. S. Cushman, on Central street.

Fred M. Kempton, who has been in Montpelier during the past month, has returned to town. He will complete the new house being built by Edward McGiffin while here.

The graduating classes of both the high and graded schools enjoyed a class ride to Berlin pond Saturday.

Miss Winifred Ellis has returned to her home in Roxbury.

John Cross is a visitor in town for a few days.

Miss Henry W. Orser has returned from a visit in Granville.

Frank Dutton is moving from the Houghton house on Elm street into the Kidder house on Main street.

Mrs. Nellie Tilden was in Barre on Saturday at George Tilden's.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Denny returned from their wedding trip to Montreal Saturday evening.

J. W. Grady of Barre was in town Sunday.

Mark Bogues is moving from the Fuller house on North Main street to the house vacated by Frank Dutton on Elm street.

Mrs. Joseph Lavolette of Barre visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Flood, over Sunday.

Edgar Taplin of South Ryegate visited his brother, Linwood Taplin, clerk in the national bank, Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. George Sanborn, who has been ill at her home on Central street for the past two weeks is much improved.

Prof. C. S. Carleton was a business visitor in Montpelier yesterday.

W. A. Shaw, who has been ill with the grip for the last ten days, is much better.

Prof. E. A. Winslow, assisted by Howard Sharpe and Neal Richmond, is making a survey near the village hall in order to establish the exact lines of the property owned by the village. It is understood that the village trustees are to make several improvements at the hall. They are also considering the proposition of erecting a new building for a city jail.

THINGS THEATRICAL.

Blanche Deyo has scored a hit in "The Social Whirl."

The mother of James K. Hackett has witnessed every stage performance her son has given since he became a star.

Thomas K. Shea's season in tragic repertory has been so successful that Nixon and Zimmerman have extended it so as to include other cities in his tour this spring.

James K. Hackett is a son of James H. Hackett, known as "Faust" Hackett and one of the greatest of the old-time actors. He was a personal friend of President Lincoln.

Paul Kester, the author of "Friend Hannah" for Annie Russell, is the lessee of a historic castle in England, where he writes all his plays. Nevertheless he is an American by birth.

Charles Cherry, who plays the hero of "Cousin Louise," was selected to be the leading man with Maxine Elliott when she first became a star, and he has filled the position for the past three seasons.

Nellie McCoy of "The Earl and the Girl" company is well known as an exceedingly agile dancer. Miss McCoy spends considerable of her time trying to invent new dancing steps. Originality in this line is necessary.

GOWN GOSSIP.

The newest shirt waist is a very mannish affair, except that it has half sleeves.

Everything is princess or empire when it comes to gowns. The girdled waist is a rarity.

The most popular gown is made of soft silk, veiling, chiffon, cloth, lace and other fine materials.

A favorite skirt decoration is that of applied bands to simulate wide tucks. These often give the appearance of a triple skirt and are very well suited to tall women.

A new devotion to the embroidered monogram on the left sleeve has shown itself. Last year the idea was tolerated, but this year the most exclusive shirt makers are pushing it.

A survey of spring fashions satisfies the observer that the only real issue of importance is the waist line. Get that right, and the gown is sure to be correct. The waist is high and apparently untrammelled, whether the gown be princess or not.—New York Post.

CURIOUS CULLINGS.

Patent medicine manufacturers flourish in South Africa, where a medical call in the city costs $5, while in the country the charges are almost prohibitive.

A New South Wales farmer went out the other day and tied his small dog to a fence. On his return he found a large carpet snake attached to the end of the leash and no signs of the dog.

Miss Florence I. Nicholson, secretary of a London children's dinner fund, said the other day, "It is a common thing in the slums of Bethnal Green to see a baby sucking a wheel steeped in gin."

Persia has a population of 9,000,000, with an area of 828,000 square miles.

Chemical fire engines are used in Sydney, Australia, and they are likely to be used largely hereafter to check bush fires during the summer months.

For years the crowded provinces of China have been disgorging their surplus population into Manchuria, where homes or land could be had at prices usually below the cheapest government land in America.

New Zealand, with a population of between 800,000 and 900,000, spends $200,000 a year on old age pensions. In Denmark the annual cost is about $216,000 per annum, spread over a population of about 2,500,000.

A great colonial exposition will be opened in Marseilles this spring and continued throughout the summer. It will mark the first attempt to organize a comprehensive manifestation of French colonial work and is arousing much interest.

Queer Tibetan Custom.

Every Tibetan family is compelled to devote its first born male child to a monastic life. Soon after birth the child is taken to a Buddhist monastery to be therefor brought up and trained in priestly mysteries.

Tennessee.

Tennessee is the Volunteer State, the name being acquired during the Seminole war, when a large number of volunteers went forward from Tennessee to take part in the struggle.

A Costly Fad.

One of the most extravagant of woman's fads on record was that of a Frenchwoman, the Marquise de la Roche-Fontelle, who, it is said, had her bed decorated with orchids. These were changed three times a week at a weekly cost of nearly $1,000.
